

AP SCORE RELEASE SCHEDULE

Students will receive access to their AP scores based on their location, starting on July 15. Student scores will be released at 8 a.m. ET, so students should make note of the local time in their time zone. To ensure they don't have any trouble getting their scores, they should check that they can sign in to their College Board account before scores release. If they don't remember their username or password, they can recover them on the site—they shouldn't create a new account.
