SFU STEM Speakers Series – Using Sound Waves to Inspect for Cracks in Train Systems

The Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) Speaker Series provides secondary school students with the opportunity to meet and interact with university students, faculty members, and/or working professionals in STEM fields. The April session speaker is Zhen (Lisa) Li, a PhD student in the Vehicle-Track Interaction Research Group at SFU, supervised by Dr. Kevin Oldknow. She completed her undergraduate degree in Mechatronic Systems Engineering at SFU before diving into research on railway transportation systems. Her work focuses on using sound waves to inspect surface-level damage, such as shallow cracks, in train wheels and tracks. Besides that, Lisa is also interested in clean energy and machine learning. In this presentation, Lisa will first share her academic journey, from her undergraduate studies in Mechatronic Systems Engineering (MSE) to PhD research. You can join the virtual session on April 26 from 1:00 – 2:00pm on Zoom. To register go to: <https://sciencealive.ca/stem-speaker-series/>
